

Washington, DC – Late yesterday, Congressman John Adler voted to pass legislation to provide $1,029,532 to local communities devastated by the December 19-20 blizzard, which left nearly two feet of snow on South Jersey and the shore area. Additional funding is expected to be allocated for the February storms. The disaster aid package passed by the House will provide financial assistance to communities impacted by the storm to help local residents and the economy recover.

"Local municipalities and taxpayers already face enormous budget constraints because of the present economic climate," Congressman John Adler said. "This legislation will help our communities recover from the effects of the blizzard. They deserve their fair share of federal resources to help deal with the costs of a particularly harsh winter."

The legislation directs $5.1 billion to the Federal Emergency (FEMA) Disaster Relief account, including more than one million dollars to the Third Congressional District. Once the bill is signed into law, FEMA will distribute funds to communities that have received a Presidential disaster declaration, including Burlington and Ocean Counties.
